Today - Tuesday November 4th - marks a historic day for all Americans.

We have the opportunity to collectively speak our minds and participate in choosing an individual who can help lead us to new heights and possibilities and, possibly, redefine the future of America.

Yesterday I voted. And it felt great. As I was voting for both our next President and the many different propositions, I was struck by what a special gift it is that we are all able to participate in such an important way and fortunate we are to have this right.

We are all aware that this is an important time for Americans; we are at a political and economic crossroads. So tomorrow, whatever your belief may be, whatever path you've chosen to follow, demand that your voice be heard and make your mark on history.
